Rooms begin at floor level.

Before a room tells its story, you feel it. Like the radiance of a person that has an effect from the very first moment. Spaces are similar in that respect. They need the right basis, one that supports and sets the tone. For nothing shapes a room so sustainably as the floor beneath our feet.

The floor makes a statement even before the first piece of furniture is in place, the colour on the wall shines and the light creates accents. It is the surface that holds everything together – and, sooner or later, the thread that accompanies us every step of the way. That makes it all the more essential that we feel at ease with it.

Discover from new perspectives the variety of our NatureSense* and AquaDura flooring in our lookbook and let yourself be inspired – for living and working spaces that make an impression from the first step.

The current flooring trends – quite clearly: quiet, durable and with distinctive character. While our NatureSense* Long flooring boards create new dimensions and visually enlarge rooms, the iconic Oak 3-strip is celebrating its big comeback. With a minimalist look and warm feeling, it offers a multifaceted foundation of well-being that stays with us for years and subtly accentuates every interior.

At over 2 metres in length, this flooring board creates new dimensions. Combined with natural woodgrain decors, the result is a harmonious overall look. This makes large rooms feel airy and cosy at the same time.

3 FORMATS FOR TIMELESS ELEGANCE

Timeless, adaptable flooring is the basis for designing a room. All the better if they are not only versatile, but also stand out for their sense of style. Like Greige Siena Oak – an elegant NatureSense floor that, with its balanced texture in three formats, is perfect for every room concept. The Classic format, with its harmonious proportions, suits any room.*

Interior STYLES

What more could one want from one’s home than cosiness, durability and authenticity, combined with a distinctive character. Whether minimalist, close to nature, timeless or a vintage lover – the current Interior Styles easily combine functionality with aesthetic sophistication.

All our shown and mentioned decors are reproductions.

Be SIMPLISTIC

Like an embrace: whereas minimalism was once radically reduced, today it combines style, lightness and cosiness. With a focus on warm, neutral tones, this style embodies a space full of serenity. Flooring appears in a new simplicity and forms the basis for timeless interior design.

live NATURAL

Back to nature: the longing for nature shapes many living and work spaces today. Natural materials, harmonious colours and organic forms create an atmosphere in which one feels at ease and can unwind.

Soft, flowing shapes are increasingly being combined with clear lines. This creates spaces that appear modern while exuding warmth and cosiness at the same time. The flooring forms the foundation and connects all elements into a natural, harmonious overall look.

INTERVIEW WITH THE DECOR EXPERTS LISA TÜRKE AND AYLA SCHWARZMAYR

All our shown and mentioned decors are reproductions.

How is a coherent interior concept created – and why does the floor play such a central role in it? In conversation with our two experts Ayla Schwarzmayr and Lisa Türke from Decor Management, we take a look behind the scenes of modern interior design. They provide insights into current trends, explain the importance of formats, materials and tactility, and show how the perfect interplay of floor, furniture and light creates a very special atmosphere.

Why, in your view, does room design really begin at floor level?

Ayla: The floor is the largest continuous design element in a room – and therefore its foundation. Even before a single piece of furniture finds its place, it defines the atmosphere. Colours, furnishings and materials only unfold their full effect with the right floor. It creates the frame within which all other elements come into their own: whether as a style-defining accent or as a discreet basis that leaves room for further design.

Which design factors are particularly decisive when choosing a floor?

Lisa: Four factors play a central role when choosing a floor: the colour influences the effect of light and the dimension of a room, its texture conveys naturalness and tactility, and the format emphasises the proportions as well as the style. There is also the type of installation, which can either create movement or clarity in the room. Only the harmonious interplay of these four aspects creates a coherent overall concept.

THE FLOOR CREATES THE FRAME IN WHICH FURNITURE, COLOURS AND ACCESSORIES CAN COME INTO THEIR OWN.

What role does the format play?

Lisa: The choice of format has a significant impact on the room's effect: whether Classic, Large, Kingsize or long plank – each format sets its own accent. For example, long planks with their generous proportions convey a calm, high-quality atmosphere and make rooms appear spacious. That is why this format also plays an important role in our decor and product development. Expressive colours and modern synchronised pores create decors that give floors a particularly natural appearance and an authentic feel.

By contrast, the herringbone pattern not only brings classic elegance into the living space, but also creates a lively overall impression through its dynamic installation pattern. As an example, we like to show our very authentic Casella Oak with a particularly expressive synchronised pore. Another highlight in herringbone format are our Baronia Oaks, which, with their authentic decor and the play of colour in their light and dark annual rings, also create an impressive room effect.

Formats specifically guide the eye and influence spatial dynamics. Each format is a central design element that sustainably shapes the character of a room. In our decor and product development, we think about formats from the outset. This results in versatile decors such as Siena Oak, which can unfold their natural appearance equally well in different formats. In addition, we developed a particularly authentic synchronised pore for this, which gives the decor natural depth and tactility.

How important are authenticity and naturalness in decor?

Ayla: Naturalness and authenticity are essential trends today – and therefore of great importance. Customers are looking for materials that not only look close to nature, but also feel genuine and impress through high-quality details. We pay particular attention to ensuring that the decors appear as authentic as possible. Both visually and tactilely, they impress with a natural appearance that comes very close to the original material and creates a high-quality, realistic look.

In our new developments – such as Fiano Elm or Calcit Stone – we placed great value on ensuring that the decors appear as authentic as possible. Visually and tactilely, they impress with a natural appearance that comes very close to the original material and creates a sophisticated, realistic look.

How important is the coordination between floor, wall, furniture and light?

Ayla: Only when all four design elements are perfectly coordinated does a coherent overall picture emerge. The floor can, for example, unfold a completely different effect through the right wall colour or the right light. Beautiful rooms are created through the interplay of all components.

Open-plan layouts in particular – which are becoming increasingly popular – call for calm and harmony. A continuous floor not only makes the living space appear larger, but also creates a more balanced overall effect.

Interior Match can be a decisive factor here: if the floor is to match the interior perfectly, we also offer a wide selection of great decors and the right design for every style.

Design becomes feeling – room by room. The following scenes invite you to experience this effect.

Transitions, niches, workplaces – they all carry more significance than their size suggests. A well-considered floor creates clarity, structure and calm, without overwhelming the room.

Whether it is focused work in the home office or the flowing connection between different areas – the right floor makes even the smallest corner stand out and turns compact places into long-lasting favourite spots.

The most personal room of all.

Pssst! Here the day ends and peace begins.

HOMESTORY

Variety in simplicity

A couple, a dog, a detached house and the question of the perfect foundation. What was sought was a floor that links style and everyday life, creates comfort and withstands daily traces of use.

Large

With the EL2151 Light Natural Casella Oak decor, the small family discovered a suitable solution: the trend floor not only fulfils all aesthetic and functional requirements perfectly, but thanks to its versatile formats – Large, Herringbone and Classic – also gives every room a highly individual character. The consistent colour palette remains undisturbed and the residential feeling is completely in flow.

The wider form of the Large flooring boards creates a generous sense of space in the living area and gives the heart of the home a generous dimension full of cosy warmth.

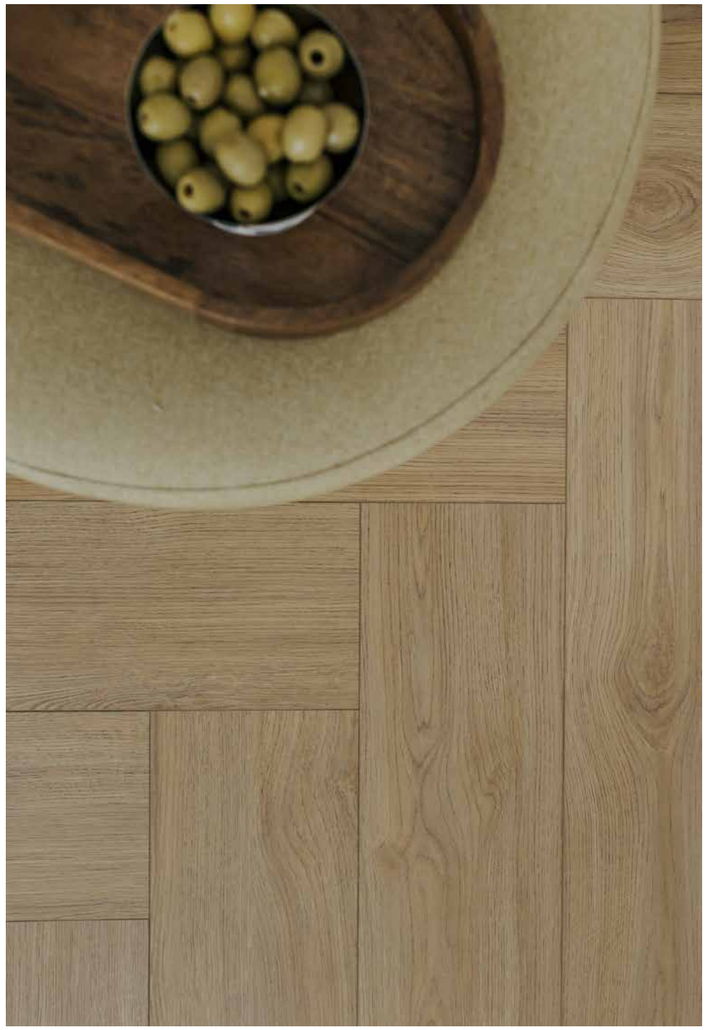

Herringbone

NatureSense* laminate does not only impress visually: the robust, wear-resistant and lightfast surface reliably withstands everyday life – whether lively family life or four quick paws. Durable, easy-care and made for the challenges of everyday living.

The warm, light brown tone brings lightness to the rooms without pushing itself into the foreground. The special herringbone installation pattern visually elongates smaller floor plans and gives them greater spaciousness. At the same time, the classic parquet look brings elegant, finely nuanced sophistication.
